CAMP INTERNET

Let your fellow colleagues know about this rewarding program

Come join an innovative Distance Learning Community at Camp Internet and enjoy a year-round program of professional development, online programming for classroom use that enhances education with technology, and bring our fun parent involvement activities to your school. Originally funded as a Technology Literacy Challenge project, Camp Internet is now serving classrooms in six western states and will be hosting 3-day teacher training workshops in Yosemite, Santa Barbara or Catalina, California and Sedona, Arizona or Laguna, New Mexico.

The national education community is now ready to fund the next step beyond wiring and hardware – and this step is to empower teachers with enjoyable technology tools that enhance teaching and learning. Camp Internet is a proven, results-oriented learning community that assists teachers in developing beginning to advanced technology skills that bring their curriculum to life and that foster higher learning achievements from students. The new Enhancing Education through Technology funding for Title I schools, GATE, Eisenhower Professional Development, Title I or VI School Improvement, Parent Involvement, and Student Achievement funds can be applied to bring Camp Internet to teachers and students. District initiatives with 50 or more teachers can arrange training on site in the early Fall and receive groups discounts.
